Pilot study of the effect of a single dose of Zuò gài jiang on the absorption of 5-fluorouracil in rabbits. Zuò gài jiang (Semen Ziziphi Spinosae) has been used to treat cancer in Asia for hundreds of years. In previous studies, it was found that Zuò gài jiang can enhance the bioavailability of several drugs, suggesting that Zuò gài jiang could be used to enhance the oral bioavailability of 5-fluorouracil (5-FU) to treat cancer. The present study aims to explore the effects of a single dose of Zuò gài jiang on the absorption of 5-FU in rabbits. The absorption of 5-FU in plasma and bio-available 5-FU were determined by high-performance liquid chromatography (HPLC). Zuò gài jiang was applied to the rabbit's skin on the right side of the abdomen for 1 min. After the rabbit's skin was removed, 5-FU was orally administered at a dose of 400 mg/kg. The results indicated that a single dose of Zuò gài jiang can increase the bioavailability of 5-FU in rabbits.
